As a current resident of Idaho and a born and raised Oregonian, as well as a current customer of Idaho Power it is with extreme disappointment that I am now aware of the B2H project.

I understand the necessity for power line expansion and progression in order to meet the demands of an ever growing population and I certainly understand economics.

However, I do not understand and never will the desire to strong arm private land owners and forcing them to allow projects like B2H on their lands. Private land owners are living the American Dream and putting their blood, sweat and tears to OWN something of their own.

I do not need a lengthy amount of words to say that THIS IS WRONG.

I sincerely hope as a company and organization you will rethink the way you are going about B2H, go back to the drawing board and come up with a different plan.

What is the point of owning something if the rights that come with it only matter as long as they are not against the interest of someone else?

Once again, THIS IS WRONG. Please, reevaluate and do NOT strong arm private land owners and RESPECT private lands.

I highly doubt that you would support this if it ran through your backyard, your pristine wilderness and your private property that you worked so hard to own. But then again, you would financially benefit from the B2H project so perhaps you would support it.
